CIA Denies Dane Tried To Trip Spies

FOIAb3b

[redacted] Intelligence Agency today disputed a report that the late Poul Bang-Jensen, Danish diplomat, once tried in vain to get CIA Director Allen Dulles to listen to him about alleged Russian spy rings.

[redacted] assistant [redacted] said the statement: "Bang-Jensen had a talk with Mr. Dulles December 10, 1957. At that time he did not indicate that he had any information about Soviet espionage or Soviet agents he wished to [redacted]

"During this meeting he did indicate that he wished to have further meetings with Mr. Dulles although he had ample opportunity to do so."

[redacted] added that Dulles is "one of the easiest men in the world" to see about such matters.

The magazine National Review and others have published reports that on eight occasions over a period of months Bang-Jensen tried without success to tell of alleged Russian agents planted in the CIA and the United Nations Secretariat.

Bang-Jensen, one-time UN official, was found fatally shot last Thanksgiving Day in a New York hotel. Police labeled it a suicide but questions have been raised about this finding.
